Aaron graduated from the University of Pennsylvania in 2009 with a Bachelor of Science Engineering in Electrical Engineering. After college he moved to New York City and worked at S&P Capital IQ, a financial software and analytics company, as a software and database engineer. A few months ago he started working at Morgan Stanley Investment Management as an Associate in quantitative financial modeling.

Carlos graduated from AISB in 2000 attending University of Chicago for a degree in Economics. After graduating he was hired to work for UBS, a Swiss financial services company, in both Switzerland and New York locations. After three and a half years in the business, Carlos decided to move to HSBC, a British financial power house headquartered in London, United Kingdom. Today Carlos continues to work for HSBC after four years, based out of Miami Florida.